

“We Work In The Coolest Offices Ever!”

Free food, grass-covered floors and beach hut meeting rooms – these amazing offices would make any 9-5 job worth getting up for

make natural, delicious that helps people

The Eco Space The Company: Innocent

Picnic tables, fake grass, bunting... work is a walk in the park at Innocent

It's cool because...

You think their bottles are quirky, now check out the offices of one of our fave smoothies, drinks and food companies. Fruit Towers, as it's affectionately known, is the HQ of Innocent in London and is known for its outdoors feel – the floor is covered with fake grass, there's a village green with benches that double as meeting spaces, plus hammocks, football tables and ping pong. There's a huge kitchen in the middle so you can see the team making new recipes and it's run on green electricity.

“We have Friday discos”

Suzie Pickard, 26, commercial executive for Innocent

“Working in such an amazing office definitely makes me more creative even though I've got more of a corporate job. We're all mixed up on our desks so the people I sit with aren't necessarily the people I work closest with, but it's a great way to meet more of my colleagues and learn what's going on in other teams.

Every morning, we get an amazing free breakfast – cereals, toast, then fruit throughout the day as well as smoothies of course. At the end of the week we have Friday beers from 5pm, when the tunes are put on the sound system and we all chat in the social areas. It's like a disco!

Innocent also offer scholarships where you can win £1,000 to go and learn something new. And there are projects in Africa which you can apply to volunteer at for a couple of weeks, expenses paid.

Each year, the whole team goes on a big away weekend too – last year it was Centre Parcs and I felt like I was on holiday with my mates.

■ www.innocentdrinks.co.uk/careers/opportunities

Unlimited smoothies?
No wonder Suzie
looks so fresh faced!